

Organic farming system campaign in Ethiopia

This organic farming agriculture system campaign in Ethiopia designed to raise awareness and support for stakeholders. It is attractive and motivated us to solve social problems concerning natural conservation that should be sustained and environmentally recommended.

And also this warmest campaign going on help us how to minimize the human impact on the environment while ensuring the agricultural system operates as naturally as possible by developing good behavioral change in the community. In doing so, the campaign will enhance high quality and large volume organic products of honey so as to benefit smallholder farmers and unemployed youth but willing to be employed of the district.

I would like to give special thanks to "Apis" and other organizations for their accommodating the campaign to our district
